REPORT

To the Contributors of the Soldiers Home.

The first report of the Home, made in the beginning of the year 1865, (February,) set forth its origin, object, and successful establishment.

At that period the institution was located at the corner of Race and Crown streets, where a large dwelling-house with out-buildings was appropriated to the purpose by our City Councils. How this enterprise was to be maintained, how continued as a grand, permanent beneficence, worthy of our city, and of its brave but disabled recipients—although not wholly uncertain—was yet future. Energetic men and warm-hearted women applied themselves to lift the veil, and in due time the fair proportions of a noble work stood revealed.

In all the earlier appeals made on behalf of the soldiers, it was clear that gratitude for their services and sympathy for their hardships in the field would combine to secure support and suitable employment for them on their return home. But it would not do to found a "refuge" upon the policy of repeated calls upon the public; liberal things were to be devised, in a way in which only liberal hearts can devise them.

The demands on the Race street Home were largely increasing: applicants presented themselves from every loyal State, in numbers beyond the capacities of the house to receive, far less to accommodate: the sick and those under surgical care required more spacious wards and better ventilation; in fact, all the departments were cramped in their operations.

Many plans were discussed patiently and perseveringly before a course of action was decided upon, but it was at length resolved to lay the whole subject before the loyal people of Pennsylvania, that it might be their honor and privilege to provide for the building and endowment of a home for disabled Union soldiers.

The zeal of the lady managers, which had so largely contributed to the previous success, here blazed afresh. With unwearied care they fostered the plan, resolutely and skilfully adapting each part to its place: the machinery was soon in motion and guided by their judicious hands to the goal of success.

The history of the great fair held at the Academy of Music in the fall of 1865 is well known as forming part of the history of eventful times; but it is due to the efforts of the ladies who projected and achieved this enterprise that some of the particulars should be placed on record.

The various departments of the fair were presided over and assisted by the following ladies:

Mrs. D. Haddock, Jr.,	Mrs. E. A. Souder,
" R. P. King,	" C. Magarge,
" E. S. Hall,	" I. Maule,
" C. S. Ogden,	" H. P. Taylor,
" Dr. E. Wallace,	" Capt. Horner,
" S. C. Perkins,	" M. A. Percival,
" H. E. Townsend,	" W. Gillespie,
" H. Haddock,	" C. Evans,
" C. Gibbons,	" S. Jones,
" S. P. Godwin,	" M. M. Selfridge,
" Jas. C. Hand,	" M. F. Hyde,
" J. Carrow,	" C. A. Howard,
" W. S. Boyd,	" McClees,
" Pennock,	" Fitzgerald,
" Davids,	" Landis,
" C. B. Andress,	" Wilson,
" W. C. Vinyard,	Miss R. Wetherill,
" Clarkson,	" F. Wadleigh,
" Hollowell,	" C. S. Field,
" A. T. Goodman,	" Bessie King.

Many other ladies were actively at work, who cheerfully rendered their time, labor, and gifts in the direction of this undertaking. Many gentlemen were found as able assistants and wise counsellors. To all these devoted friends this special acknowledgment is gratefully made, for the page is too narrow to set down in order a tithe of their kindnesses.

When the fair was closed, and a proper disposition had been made for the sale of goods remaining on hand, the accounts were settled, showing for net proceeds:

Amount paid in cash to Treasurer.....	$1,748 68
Investment in Government securities.....	105,417 38
Total	<hr/> $107,166 06

However gratifying this result might be, the sum realized was not sufficient for the erection and endowment of the institution as proposed. Accordingly, application was made to the State authorities for the use of the new building intended for the State Arsenal and subsequently used as a Government hospital.

Our Legislature and Governor, ever awake to the interests of the soldiers, placed this property, without delay, at the service of the Board of Managers of the Home, rent free. An appropriation of $5,000, made for the year 1864 and repeated in 1865, was continued for the then current year. The building was soon adapted, and removal effected April 1, 1866.

By these arrangements it will be seen that the amounts lodged with the Treasurer could be applied, principal and interest, to the great objects designed.

The building now known as the "Soldiers Home" stands at the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Filbert streets; length on Filbert street one hundred and eighty-three feet, breadth on Sixteenth street fifty feet. It is handsome and well constructed of pressed bricks, three stories high, and well arranged and ventilated.

A diagram facing page 14 exhibits the ground plan, by which it will be clear that the entire space of the lot (one hundred and eighty-three by one hundred and four feet) is devoted almost exclusively to the health, comfort, and necessities of the inmates. The second story of the main edifice—less a few feet on the eastern end, partitioned off for small apartments for Steward and assistants—gives a noble room for a sleeping ward of the full breadth of the building and nearly of its entire length. The third story, of the same dimensions, is divided into a sleeping and an hospital ward; the latter, entered from the western end, shows a “dispensary,” an “operating-room,” “apothecary’s room,” and apartments for special cases, with an ante-room for common use. Both the stories are clean, airy, and well lighted, and have in connection baths, wash-rooms, and other conveniences.

On the extreme southeast corner of the lot a plan is marked on the diagram for a new building forty-eight feet long, now in course of erection, to meet the wants of a separate and quiet school-room and of work-shops, where the men may follow their former trades, or be instructed in light and profitable work. This structure also secures the great conveniences of provision and coal cellars, matters not included in the original plan of the premises.

It scarcely will be deemed out of place to present here, as briefly as possible, the mode of conducting the affairs of the Home, and a general sketch of the results obtained, since erroneous impressions of the good done, and unreasonable expectations of what ought to be done, are met with occasionally. The beneficence established by your generous contributions, and committed by chartered trust to a Board of Managers in conjunction with a Committee of Lady Visitors, is conducted by your representatives in person, not by deputy. The welfare of the inmates is made their daily business; this is actually so performed. To this end the Ladies’ Committee meet weekly, and delegates of their number make daily visits for the management of the general domestic affairs of the house, and especially of the hospital, library, chapel, &c. The Matron thus has constant advisers in all housekeeping administrations, and the Board of Managers able and efficient coadjutors. The Executive Committee of the Board also meet weekly to receive the reports of the Steward, Surgeon, &c.; to audit and discharge bills of supplies, and to consult on questions of order and policy. Delegates from this Committee also visit the Home every evening, from eight to ten o'clock. To these are referred all candidates for admission and discharge, and all reports touching the good order, propriety, and reputation of the establishment.

The Steward, in all the intervals of these daily sessions, holds subordinate powers of admission and discharge, so that no worthy applicant with proper credentials need be unnecessarily detained, and no disorderly inmate can long violate the peace of the Home. Such exercise of power by the Steward, under established rule, is only temporary: every case that occurs, whether of order or disorder, whether it adds to the number of inmates, or detracts from the well-being of any individual, is separately considered in Committee, and acted on with patience and impartiality.

As there is no military discipline, the soldier's honor is the main guarantee of good order in and about the house: the only punishment is dishonorable discharge. This painful necessity is used sparingly, and only after repeated monitions and appeals to offenders to amend their ways. On the whole, the system works well; a large population, or rather family, lives in peace together; but the vicious and incorrigible are not allowed to destroy the general comfort.

The Executive Committee have in charge complete books of accounts for all the expenditures, for the amount of which they draw on the Treasurer, whose report is attached. They see that there is kept a daily record of all items of business or interest, and a full registry of the inmates, each of whom on entering has a descriptive list taken, covering the particulars of his enlistment, discharge from service, disability, residence, pension, family, &c., and the names of two friends or acquaintances who can be addressed in case of necessity. This list contains his consent to the established rules and regulations, given under his own hand. If the applicant should be in ordinary health, he is furnished with the number of his bed and his place at table; if sick or requiring surgical care, a ticket is made out addressed to the Surgeon, which is reported upon by that officer, who enters the patient's name upon his books. In each case, when professional attendance ceases, a return of discharge from hospital is required.

It can be said truly, that no worthy applicant has been refused admission to the Home, nor is there any thing arbitrary or narrow in the manner of dispensing its benefits. No State boundaries, no distinctions of color or nation, are recognized. The proper subjects for the benefits of this institution are described thus: "Such persons who, while in the service of the United States, have been disabled through wounds or sickness, and are thereby unable to perform the ordinary avocations of life."

"Service of the United States and disability," therefore, are closely scrutinized, and the evidence of honorable discharge by the Government is required to guard against imposition. Continuance of the disability from time to time must be looked after. To accomplish these objects more perfectly, committees of inspection are appointed, statedly to muster and examine the inmates, and to discharge such as appear to be able to earn their own living, or whose admittance by the Executive Committee is no longer warrantable at the time of inspection. One such commission was appointed, which acted in October last on the business of the first six months after removal; one stands ordered to act in April next.

The reports annexed will show in detail the workings of the several departments. The school has become widely and favorably known among the soldiers of all the loyal States. Many wounded men seek admission in order to avail themselves of a course of instruction.

For the hospital, a high reputation has been earned among the profession and throughout the community. Under the able and attentive conduct of Dr. McArthur, who has been kindly assisted in consultation by the most eminent talent of the city, many of the most difficult operations in surgery have been performed with remarkable success. Filled at all times as the ward has been with lingering chronic cases, the ratio of deaths has been surprisingly low; it may be added that in all the wards of the Home, no case of cholera occurred, and none of contagious disease.

The Steward's report gives the number of inmates at this date as 197. The sleeping accommodations of the house are :

Ward A (2d story),.....	120	beds.
Ward B (3d story),.....	48	"
Hospital ward (3d story),.....	45	"

The average cost of maintenance for six months, including board, school and hospital expenses, and paid labor is, per man, forty-five cents daily; or if all put to the account of provisions, fifteen cents per meal.

And in the high prices of all commodities, it is clear that this low rate for a full, wholesome meal could not have been secured, but for the unvarying kindness and favor shown the Home—for the soldier's sake—by all classes of merchants and dealers.

In providing for the physical requirements of the inmates of the Soldiers Home, their spiritual wants have not been neglected. Many of the clergymen of the city have visited the men, and, when their duties would permit, have conducted in divine worship,—all which services are gratefully remembered.

At an early period, the Rev. Edward A. Foggo, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, commenced his regular labors in the true spirit of Christian love, and established stated services once on each Sunday, and once during the week. His faithful work and earnest teachings were emulated by his assistant, the Rev. Thos. Pool Hutchinson, who subsequently became his successor. This gentleman has faithfully and efficiently performed his duties for two years, almost without intermission, adorning his profession with a modest courtesy. To both of these true missionaries, the warmest obligations are due.

For the past year, Miss Elizabeth N. Biddle, has been untiring in her efforts to advance the moral and spiritual welfare of the soldiers of the Home. Her Bible-class has been regularly held with the most promising results. The religious teachings and refined manners of this lady have spread a happy influence among the men, while her ready thought and quick intelligence have been sought by the Managers, when shaping plans for the happiness and advancement of those placed under their care.

After a review of the facts herein presented, should the question be asked, "How is it that so many who have been soldiers apparently—some of them wounded certainly—are to be found in our streets soliciting aid, or exercising a calling akin to vagrancy?" the answer is at hand.

Many will not accept the comforts provided and offered, because they prefer a roving life, and will not submit to the orderly regulations required; for a like reason, some who have been inmates, have voluntarily sought discharge, or have quitted without notice.

Experience proves that many have no evidence of honorable military service or discharge therefrom.

Many have been discharged from this and other Homes on account of repeated misdemeanors—not to say crimes; for infractions of order and morality, or because they were considered capable of earning their own living, or were imposing on benefits designed only for the disabled.

This portion of the subject can be touched upon merely; the whole is submitted most respectfully to your candid consideration.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

To the Board of Managers of the Soldiers Home:

Immediately after the removal of the Home to its present location, warm hearts and willing hands applied themselves to the work of reducing to systematic order, what hitherto had been in a great degree experimental. It was a noble undertaking to render this asylum—the first-established one in the country for the disabled volunteer—all it was designed to be; a true Home of occupation, thought and feeling, as well as a repose for shattered frames. Much experience had already been gathered and turned to account in the too narrow limits of the Race street buildings; much had to be laid up, undeveloped for want of space for its proper exercise; but vastly more was needed, only to be picked up bit by bit, before the institution could rightly fill out its proportions and the hopes entertained.

A roomy building was in possession, good order established and an ever-watchful care exerted for the preservation of health, comfort, and a moral and religious condition. It was not enough to provide chapel, library and rooms for reading and conversation, however valuable these might be in themselves; there was plainly too much unemployed time among the inmates, whom disabilities and broken health deterred from the exercise of former trades and avocations. It was in design to teach new trades and light work of a profitable sort, to such as were willing and able to learn, yet no part of the building, as then divided, could well be allotted to work-shops. But it was practicable to provide schools and school-rooms, and should it be found possible hereafter to provide for training in handicraft, a fair share of time and opportunity could and would be allowed to the industrious workmen for mental culture. To make out of our crippled defenders more intelligent and useful members of society, was the high aim of these thoughts and efforts.

It was remarked during the war that nearly all loyal American soldiers could read and write. Some had been well educated, very many partially so, while some few seemed to have had no advantages whatever in this respect. This state of things was before the Managers in working out the educational scheme.

Scarcely was the new Home in running order, when Miss Mary Whelen, with a living energy, acted out the wishes of the Board and her own liberal thoughts, to the blessing of a school. She nobly volunteered to become the teacher, and right nobly does she continue to perform her self-imposed duties. Highly educated, systematic and gentle, while firm, she has brought rare abilities and experience to the task. Her school prospered.

Thrice a week, in the chapel, Miss Whelen punctually met her school, where she labored to impart to classes of willing and respectful pupils the blessings of education, in the rudiments and through the higher branches.

Following out the thought of adapting instruction and future occupation to the disabilities under care, the Managers soon saw that a class could be made up for special training as telegraphers, accountants, book-keepers and writers; this work was well adapted to men "shorn of their fair proportions," and these accomplishments were in remunerative demand.

Accordingly, in the month of July last, an agreement was entered into with Mr. Joseph H. Lawrence, himself a volunteer soldier and a graduate of Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College, to instruct a class of (say) twenty pupils, to be clerks and operators. An outer building was conveniently fitted up with the fixtures and apparatus required, including five instruments, (four sounders, one recorder,) and a telegraphic circuit across the building. The members of the new class applied themselves zealously to secure the advantages offered, and the click of the operators could be heard at all times in self-practice or in communication with one another.

The sessions of the school were now established on the morning and afternoon of each day, Mr. Lawrence readily giving his assistance in Miss Whelen's school, where his industry, patience and capability were so fully evinced, that the engagement made for a special course, expanded into a yearly agreement to take charge of the general duties of the schools, which, with the addition of a new one for the colored inmates, were committed to the care of one of the Executive Committee, who was made Supervisor.

Thus much for the history of this effort at improvement. Occupation has been secured in a profitable direction, not only during the stated sessions, but to a great extent in the intervals, and up to the hour for retiring at night. It is true that all in the Home do not avail themselves of the privileges urged upon their acceptance; infirmity, disinclination for mental effort, advanced years, prejudice,—these, singly or combined, hold back too large a number. But much has been gained within a year; a desire for learning, that is manifested in ways outside of prescribed studies, as reading, debate, elocution and music, together with a higher tone of morals and a more orderly deportment.

MAINTENANCE OF THE SCHOOLS.

As there was no special fund for the purposes of education, the expenses attending the plan established had to be charged to the general account:

Cost of apparatus, fixtures, salary, &c.....$834 94

Towards the close of last year, however, the sum of $1,000 (invested in City six per cent. loan) was devoted to the education of the inmates of this Home, through the kindness of Mrs. E. W. Hutter and Misses Sager and Claghorn, who labored assiduously at the fair held in Concert Hall in 1862, to provide means to purchase a library for the use of the soldiers; but the Home having been provided with a library of some seven thousand volumes, these ladies directed this benevolence towards the schools.

NUMBER OF PUPILS.

The whole number of pupils who at any time have attended the schools, is sixty. Of these, fifty-three are white, seven colored.

The number now in attendance is forty-three. Of these

COURSE OF STUDY AND PROGRESS THEREIN.

The branches taught are Telegraphing, Book-keeping, Penmanship, Arithmetic, (mental and written,) Spelling, Reading, Grammar, Geography, Composition, Mental Philosophy, &c.

The general progress is good, although proper allowance should be made in fixing a standard of improvement; this should be modified by considerations of loss of early opportunities, wounds, age, feeble health, the soldiers' hardships, &c., &c. During the short period of the schools, four pupils have obtained situations.

One telegraphic operator.

Three book-keepers and writers.

While several more will soon give token of their ability to earn their own living.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

SURGEON'S REPORT.

PHILADELPHIA, February 19, 1867.

To the Board of Managers of the Soldiers Home in the City of Philadelphia.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to present the following report of the Hospital Department, for the year ending January 31, 1866.

Under treatment during the year, 202. This does not include such "casual" patients as have received treatment from time to time, and of whom I have kept no record, but of those only who have either occupied beds in the Hospital ward, or have reported to me frequently for treatment.
